To whom it concerns,

I am writing to inform you that the land at Newcastle Lake, Co Meath belonging to Peter and Margaret Brittain of Newcastle House, Kilmainhamwood, Kells, Co Meath is now an Irish Wildlife Trust nature reserve.

Professionally conducted baseline ecological studies have identified that the site supports a high level of biological diversity as well as species of national and European importance. Due to the importance of the site to Irish natural heritage it is now being jointly managed by the Irish Wildlife Trust and the landowners for the protection and preservation of the wildlife and habitats present.

We would appreciate communication with yourselves regarding any matters arising within your organisation that may affect the ecological integrity of the site.

Yours sincerely,

Kieran Flood
Irish Wildlife Trust Reserves Officer
