TO whom it concerns,

Esther has attended me with chest related problems over the past 4 years. She has had persistent severe chest infections on a number of occasions during that time and at other times has self-medicated with decongestants and cough medicines at home herself. In March 2009, she had a severe throat and chest infection requiring antibiotic and steroid treatments.

A severe infection in May 2011 continued for at least 2 months with Esther requiring several courses of antibiotics and steroids. Chest Xray needed to be carried out which showed acute on chronic inflammation.

Repeated antibiotics and steroids were needed to achieve resolution of this and a repeat smear finally confirmed clearing in late July 2011.

In Jan 2012, she presented with another chest infection and sinusitis with wheeze, requiring antibiotics and steroids.

Esther has repeatedly expressed her concern over strong smells emanating from a factory just next to her house. She feels nauseous from the smell which prevents her from going outside around her house frequently. She feels that the smell causes her to cough and she feels caught in her chest on many days that the smell is particularly strong.

On one occasion when I did a house call to the family, I did note an unpleasant pungent smell in the immediate area of their home.

Yours sincerely,

Dr. Aine Bermingham

Ann Kehoe
