I write to you to express my concern and opposition at the recent proposal of Dublin Port to undertake a dredging project that will see 9.7 million tonnes of dredge waste into Dublin Bay.

This is Ireland's only designated biosphere. It has particular significance for our wildlife, recreational activities and brings hundreds of thousands of visitors to the area each year. It is crucial that this area is protected from potential harm caused by the dumping this amount of dredge waste.

The redistribution of such a vast amount of sediment and dredge waste could have potentially disastrous effect of the epifauna of the bay and could negatively impact on the protected wildlife species the bay is famous for. I am a SCUBA diver who dives in Dublin Bay all year around and it is a huge part of my life. I know first hand the beauty and abundance of life just under the surface of Dublin Bay. I don't object to the dredging project, which in its self will impact on the Bay, only to the waste disposal method proposed.

There must be a disused quarry or landfill site where this waste can be disposed of which is not a UNESCO biosphere! I am very concerned about the potential for the release of hydrogen sulphide in the area around the dredging. Similar emissions of hydrogen sulphide were reported in Cork and that operation was 10 times smaller than this proposal. Further to these potential emissions is the possibility of dredging up heavy metal deposits often found in shipping ports. Such deposits are often harmless when trapped in the sediment but could prove disastrous if disturbed and then redistributed into the coastal waters. Lets not disgrace ourselves by destroying this beautiful amenity on our capitals doorstep with this toxic waste.

Yours sincerely,

Dermot Moynihan
