I am deeply concerned about the proposed new discharge point at Rathcoursey where Dairygold/Tine are seeking a licence to discharge 4 million litres of effluent per day into Cork Harbour at East Ferry.

The outfall is located between two protected sites for migratory birds. One to the north of the pipe, along the northern shores of the Great Island. The second just beyond East Ferry to the south at Saleen creek.

Cork Harbour and Rathcoursey, East Ferry are significantly important areas for sea bass. The species is currently protected under EU law, as its numbers have fallen below safe biological levels due to overfishing.
