Dear sir/madam,

I have serious concerns about the pumping of huge amounts of industrial effluent into Cork Harbour at Rathcoursey.

The East Ferry and North Channel areas are critical and protected areas for many important species of wildlife and sea life including sea bass which are protected under EU legislation and an important area for migratory birds.

I am very much in favour of the company bringing employment to the region. However, please ensure that this is done properly to protect generations to come.

Please do not grant permission to Dairygold pump their waste into Cork Harbour. Reroute to the open seas.

Sincerely,

Tony Power
