Dear Sir (Madam),

I would like to strongly object to the renewal of the ABP rendering plant's license and also to their expansion.

I live in a beautiful area in Ferrybank called Gyles Quay. We are close to the river and our family has lived there for many years.

The only issue we've had for the past twenty years or so is the stench from the rendering plant. When the wind is blowing in our direction, the odours are actually shocking. All of our neighbours have the same issue and in my opinion it's high time that the issue is addressed. I honestly don't know how the plant can get away with it?

I guess we have just suffered in silence over the years and although complaints have been made in the past, nothing appears to have changed.

When I learned of the license renewal, I felt it was time to have my say. I'm also shocked that their expansion can even be considered. Surely the existing issues should be sorted first?

Many of my friends live along Abbey Road in Ferrybank and I know that they are sick and tired of the stench and how it affects their lives.

I'm also concerned that the air quality is being affected. What proof do we have that the emissions are not affecting our health?

My understanding is that the factory is mainly self-regulated? How often are the EPA down here monitoring the situation in terms of the stench and emissions. I think it's high time that proper checks are put in place where that plant is concerned.

Concerned Gyles Quay resident.
